redge inspectors just as soon as the Hawalian Dredging Company starts active operations on the Pearl Harbor work. Though the results of the recent examination, held at the Naval Station, have not been made public, it is generally understood that by no means all of the applicants managed to pass. Though the examination was well advertised, but few applications were received and only a few of those who did apply appeared for the exam-

Not only is a high degree of intelligence needed in order to pass the examination for the position of dredge inspector, but the applicant must have considerable technical education well. As the pay is less than $4 per day, no man of the type fleeded is go ing to throw up good employment just for the sake of entering the employ of the government.

On the mainland, where there is not such a steady demand for men, the ex-aminations always bring out many more applicants than can be used, an there are many who have qualified but have not received employment.

Rather than hold another examina tion, with the prospect of still facing a shortage of applicants, it is though likely that the Navy Department will either transfer some inspectors from mainland navy yards, or will appoint cligibles from mainland lists. In eith et event, it is not likely that another examination will be held here.

Next to the changed color of the Next to the changed color of the whip, the first thing that catches the eye of the visitor when he goes on board the Buffalo, is the absence of the marine sentry. A blue-jacket looking very miserable with his cartifice belt and sidearms, stands at the head of the gangplank and halts the carried visitor. He wears a sort of Learnel visitor. casual visitor. He wears a sort of I-know-this-is-not-my-business expression and is evidently wavering between a desire to show that he has the making of a soldier in him and a feeling that he'd like to get his hands on that marine that shoved this dress parade ob off ohto him.

The detaching of the marines from the unmixed blessing that some of the advocates of the experiment thought it would. Officers of both the Navy and Marine Corps are far from satisfied and rumor has it that the Congressional Committee on Naval Affairs does not entirely approve of the scheme. The detailing of seamen to do sentry duty necessitates a decided increase in the complement of men on each ship and is costing the governeach ship and is costing the govern-ment a lot of money, sailors getting considerable more pay than marine

This is not by any means the first ime that Commander Frank M. Bost wick, U. S. N., now in command of the Buffalo, has been here. Thirty-one years ago, while yet a junior officer, he came to Honolulu on the old U. S. Pensacola, now a training ship with eadquarters at San Francisco. Commander Bostwick remembers well the Hawaii of monarchy days, and was personally acquainted with King Kalakaua and the Princess Likelike He, in common with the other officers the Pensacola, was royally while here the first time, and so pleas ant were the memories that he carried away with him, that he always looked forward with joyful anticipation to each visit to Honolulu.

past. Even the brass B on the bows of the launches and cutters of the ship have been painted over. Likewise the oadside guns are gray.

The reenforced marine garrison is now firmly established in its new home and the regular routine has been nome and the regular routine has been put into effect. Owing to the absence of a suitable parade ground in the immediate vicinity, evening parade is not likely to become the popular function with townspeople that it otherwise
